SCHOOL DESIGNED PRACTICUM COURSES

Temple Law School is pleased to announce the following Spring 2023 School Designed Practicum courses. Please see each individual description to learn what materials to submit, to whom you should submit the materials, and the application deadline.

A Practicum combines an experiential learning project with supervision and evaluation by a member of the full-time faculty. Some Practicum courses are designed individually by the student in consultation with a faculty member; others are recurring projects that faculty members sponsor, like those listed below.

Below is a table of contents grouping our School Designed Practicums in three broad categories: Confirmed, Pending Confirmation, and No Longer Accepting Applications. The practicum opportunities confirmed for next semester are further organized by application deadline date.

We encourage you to apply for any practicum opportunities that are confirmed or pending confirmation for Spring 2023. The information contained in Pending Confirmation section, including whether the practicum will ultimately be offered in Spring 2023, is subject to change. In the event we confirm that any of our practicums pending confirmation will not run in the spring, we will notify applicants and update this catalogue accordingly.

Students who wish to apply for more than one School Designed Practicum should email lawpract@temple.edu with a list of the practicums to which they wish to apply ranked in order of preference.

HEALTH, REPRODUCTIVE, AND HUMAN RIGHTS PRACTICUM (INTERNATIONAL RESCUE COMMITTEE)

There are two slots available for second-, third-, and fourth-year law students in this Practicum supervised by Professors Patty Skuster and Scott Burris.

The experiential learning projects offered with this Practicum is with the International Rescue Committee (IRC). IRC provides opportunities for refugees, asylees, victims of human trafficking, survivors of torture, and other immigrants to thrive in America. Each year, thousands of people, forced to flee violence and persecution, are welcomed by the people of the United States into the safety and freedom of America. These individuals have survived against incredible odds. The IRC works with government bodies, civil society actors, and local volunteers to help them translate their past experiences into assets that are valuable to their new communities.

Following the US Supreme Court Ruling in Dobbs v. Jacking, which overturned the constitutional right to abortion, states regulation of abortion is widely varied. About half of U.S. states have already restricted access to abortion care with more expected to follow. Depending on the state, both the person seeking an abortion and individuals assisting in accessing abortion care may be legally vulnerable. Other states, however, are moving to protect abortion access and to prepare for an increase in individuals traveling to their state for services.

This ruling has significant implications for the IRC's U.S. clients. IRC anticipates that abortion restrictions will make accessing abortion care and other sexual and reproductive healthcare services more difficult, leading to negative health, psychological, and socioeconomic outcomes. Evidence clearly shows that legally restricting and criminalizing abortion does not reduce the number of abortions, and instead increases the likelihood of unsafe abortions with potentially deadly consequences. Additionally, limiting the right to abortion care is connected to other human rights the IRC is committed to such as bodily autonomy, gender equality, and racial justice. The IRC is committed to continuing to support access to safe abortion care, advancing reproductive rights and justice in our programs, and providing clients with evidence-based services.

Students in this practicum will update a legal guide for the provision of abortion care in IRC operational and soon-to-be operational states, which includes scenarios noting proposed abortion access bills and what may happen in the next 12 months. The students will provide up-to-date state-based information to IRC about the law as it pertains to abortion providers and individuals who may provide information and other assistance to IRC clients who need abortion. The students will build upon work completed by a consultant which ends in December 2022. The students will complete the project using policy surveillance data from the Center for Public Health Law research, with verification through other sources such as the Guttmacher Institute, Center for Reproductive Rights and others.

This Practicum is ideal for law students who are committed to, or interested in learning more about, reproductive rights and justice, the rights of refugees and migrants, providing legal assistance to organizations providing health and social services, or legal research and public interest advocacy. If you are interested in this opportunity, please forward a cover letter/statement of interest, resume, and writing sample to lawpract@temple.edu by 12:00 pm on November 28, 2022.

ENVIRONMENTAL LAW PRACTICUM (CENTER FOR PROGRESSIVE REFORM)

There is one slot available for second- and third-year law students in this Practicum supervised by Professor Amy Sinden.

The experiential learning project offered with this Practicum, the Toxic Floodwater Assessment and Risk Reduction Project along the Delaware River, is with Center for Progressive Reform. The Center for Progressive Reform harnesses the power of law and public policy to create a responsive government, a healthy environment, and a just society. See www.progressivereform.org for more information about the organization and its activities.

Objective:

Rising seas, destructive storm surges, more frequent and heavier rainfall and flooding—the impacts of climate change are present and projected to amplify in the Delaware River Basin over the next several decades. With many industrial and chemical storage facilities along the banks of the Delaware River and its tributaries, the region is increasingly vulnerable to catastrophic chemical and hazardous waste releases, threatening the health, safety, and security of local communities, many of which are already marginalized.

While flooding is common in the Delaware River Basin, many of the region's residents, especially low-wealth and Black and Brown families, are especially vulnerable to the effects of climate change. And as extreme weather events become more frequent and severe in the coming years, this region faces an elevated risk of catastrophic hazardous chemical spills driven by flooding and other climate impacts.

To advance climate and environmental justice in these communities and strengthen public health protections, the Center for Progressive Reform will coordinate with an interdisciplinary team of legal and policy practitioners and scholars, environmental scientists, communications specialists, grassroots advocates, and technical experts to conduct groundbreaking scientific and policy research into the risks toxic chemical spills pose to regional communities; develop and implement a communications strategy to amplify findings; and undertake advocacy around the issue.

Duties and Responsibilities:

- (1) identify the industrial facilities in the Delaware River Basin at greatest risk of flooding and chemical disaster through the first-of-its kind geospatial map;
- (2) analyze the regulatory and operational gaps that contribute to these risks of major releases;
- (3) identify and engage the communities most vulnerable to harm in collaborative research, communications, and advocacy;
- (4) develop and promote dynamic and sustained multimedia public communications; and
- (5) collaboratively develop and advocate for strategies to prevent catastrophic spills.

To elevate our findings and recommendations, the intern will aid policy analyst in background research for a public report, containing at least 8-10 maps demonstrating various industrial risks to vulnerable communities in the lower Delaware River Basin and identifying policy gaps and recommendations for Pennsylvania, New Jersey, and Delaware.

This Practicum is ideal for law students who are committed to, or interested in learning more about, a career in environmental law, policy, and public interest. If you are interested in this opportunity, please forward a cover letter/statement of interest addressed to “Center for Progressive Reform” and resume to lawpract@temple.edu by 12:00 p.m. on December 2, 2022.

CRIMINAL JUSTICE PRACTICUM (PHILADELPHIA LAWYERS FOR SOCIAL EQUITY)

There are two slots available for second- and third-year law students in this Practicum supervised by Associate Dean Kristen Murray.

Philadelphia Lawyers for Social Equity (PLSE) offers free legal representation to low-income clients who are trying to clear their criminal records so they can qualify for better jobs, housing, credit, and other benefits. (By way of background, if someone is arrested in Pennsylvania and charged with a crime, even they never had to attend court or were later found not guilty after a trial, or anything in between, they still have a criminal record. Unless it is sealed or a judge orders it to be erased or expunged, that criminal record is permanently available on the internet to the public. The only way to get a conviction off your record, even if it was committed decades ago, is to get a pardon from the Governor of Pennsylvania.) Through its Criminal Record Expungement Project, PLSE files petitions for expungement that, after a hearing, could result in a judicial order that commands the City and State police and other agencies to remove the information of that person’s criminal history from their record. PLSE files over 2,400 expungement petitions per year. Additionally, PLSE has a growing community education and outreach program.

In this Practicum, students will have a range of duties, with tasks varying week to week. First formed by Executive Order 1987 by Governor Robert P. Casey and now codified by Act 29 of 2017, the Pennsylvania Office of State Inspector General’s (OSIG) Southeast Regional Office’s (801 Market Street, Philadelphia) mission is to “deter, detect, prevent, and eradicate fraud, waste, misconduct and abuse in the program, operations and contracting of executive agencies.” The OSIG has two investigative bureaus: the Bureau of Fraud Prevention and Prosecution (BFPP) and the Bureau of Special Investigations (BSI). JUDICIAL INTERNSHIP PRACTICUM (DELAWARE COURT OF CHANCERY)

There is one slot available for second- and third-year full-time law students and third- and fourth-year part time law students in this Practicum supervised by Professor Jonathan Lipson.

The experiential component of this Practicum is with the Delaware Court of Chancery. The Delaware Court of Chancery is the preeminent forum for resolving disputes involving the internal affairs of Delaware corporations and other business entities responsible for a significant amount of the world’s commerce. The Court of Chancery is a non-jury trial court that exclusively handles civil cases. Founded in 1792, the court traces its roots to feudal England and has jurisdiction to hear and determine all matters and causes in equity. In today's practice, litigation in the Court of Chancery focuses on complex corporate and commercial disputes. The court’s unique docket stems from Delaware’s role as the legal home to more than 1.3 million entities, accounting for approximately two-thirds of all Fortune 500 companies and one-half of all public corporations in the United States. The Court of Chancery also handles guardianships, trust and estate matters, and land disputes. The members of the court consist of the Chancellor, six Vice Chancellors and two Masters.

In this placement, students will work closely with a Judicial Officer’s law clerk to assist with legal research, assist in the preparation of judicial opinions and memoranda, read and review motions and briefs before the court, attend arguments, hearings and trials, and assist the judge in myriad other ways. Because the Court of Chancery handles a high volume of cases at an unusually rapid pace, students can see many cases go through the entire lifecycle from complaint to final resolution. In addition, because the court issues numerous detailed written decisions, including post-trial decisions, students have the opportunity to make substantial contributions to the legal opinions of the court.

This practicum is ideal for students seeking a judicial clerkship, interested in a career in corporate law, or students who want to gain valuable research and writing experience. Students will need to commit to a minimum of 10 hours per week. The CAU utilizes a multi-disciplinary approach to child advocacy by teaming attorneys and social workers to represent our young clients. They represent most of the dependent children in Philadelphia, and presently have (16) staff attorneys and (34) social workers/social service advocates.

In this Practicum, students are expected to participate in all aspects of representing our clients, who range in age from birth to 21 years of age. The practicum curriculum will focus on how to collaboratively work a case using a strengths-based lens of looking at the family and how to navigate the system for the maximum benefit to the client; our multi-disciplinary team approach (social worker/attorney); courtroom experience (permanency and dispositional hearings); developing interviewing, counseling and investigatory skills; research into community programs and services for our clients and their families; collaboration with outside agencies to meet the needs and welfare of our clients; ethical considerations inherent in our dual role of counsel and guardian ad litem; developing the appropriate tools to successfully communicate with clients and conduct legal research, analysis and writing as needed.

This Practicum is ideal for law students who are committed to, or interested in learning more about, a career advocating on behalf of children in the dependency arena and the child welfare system, or a career in public interest law. “NAME, IMAGE AND LIKENESS” PRACTICUM

There is one slot available for a second- or third-year law student in this 2-credit Practicum supervised by Professor Kenneth A. Jacobsen.

The experiential learning opportunity offered by this Practicum is with Jordan Mark Kelso, Esquire, a 2020 graduate of Temple University Beasley School of Law. After graduation, Mr. Kelso worked as an associate at large law firms in Philadelphia and West Palm Beach, Florida before joining a firm that enables him to concentrate his practice representing athletes in monetizing and pursuing commercial sponsorship opportunities for their “name, image and likeness.” Mr. Kelso is a member of the bars of both Pennsylvania and Florida.

Since the landmark U.S. Supreme Court decision last year in the Alston case and with a change in NCAA policies and the enactment of new state laws, college athletes who were previously prohibited from accepting money for sponsorship or endorsement deals (or risk losing their amateur status and eligibility to compete in college sports) can now receive money for promoting products and services. This area is heavily regulated by various state laws and university policies, and navigating these waters requires research and analysis of permissible and prohibited conduct under both.

The student who participates in this Practicum will be expected to assist Mr. Kelso with all phases of his representation of his existing clients and with his negotiations with new, prospective clients. Students will utilize the skills of factual investigation, legal research and writing, drafting and analysis as needed.

Because his office is in Florida, students will interact with Mr. Kelso mainly via Zoom, email, telephone and by other electronic means, although there may be opportunities to meet in person with clients and prospective clients in the Northeast, where Mr. Kelso has clients at major universities.

The student will need to commit to a minimum of 8 hours per week. If you are interested in this opportunity, please send your resume to lawpract@temple.edu.

ENVIRONMENTAL LAW PRACTICUM (CLEAN AIR COUNCIL)

There are several slots available in this practicum supervised by Professor Amy Sinden. This practicum will be 10 hours a week for 3 credit hours.

Clean Air Council is Pennsylvania's oldest environmental and health non-profit organization and has been working to protect everyone's right to a clean and healthy environment for over 50 years. The Council pursues cutting-edge litigation, participates in federal and state rulemakings, watchdogs environmental permitting, and champions impactful policy reforms; all in close collaboration with impacted communities.

The Council was founded in 1967 by a group of forward-looking community leaders, policy makers, and progressive business leaders. Headquartered in Philadelphia, the Council made a name for itself by the mid-1970s as the result of two major achievements: establishing and distributing a daily regional air quality index report (still in use today); and forcing Pennsylvania to implement its vehicle emissions testing program. The Council is continuing this tradition of tackling big challenges through programs to address the public health and environmental threats caused by shale gas extraction and distribution, climate change, developments in our energy markets and infrastructure, and major stationary sources of air pollution.

The Council maintains an active litigation docket addressing a broad range of environmental health issues in Pennsylvania and beyond. The Council regularly brings cases in both state and federal courts and before agency tribunals, such as Pennsylvania's Environmental Hearing Board and Public Utility Commission. We litigate a wide variety of issues within the realm of air quality regulation, water law, and energy law. The Council also engages in a significant amount of policy work, leading the charge on a variety of issues in Pennsylvania such as Pennsylvania's implementation of carbon cap and trade and regulation of methane emissions.

Students participating in the practicum will make substantive contributions to the Council's legal program and, with full support from senior attorneys, will take on staff attorney-level tasks. Students have an opportunity to assume a great deal of responsibility, while receiving mentoring from a close-knit group of environmental attorneys.

Qualifications:

- Completion of 1-2 years in accredited J.D. program
- Demonstrated passion for public interest law and/or environmental protection
- Excellent writing and analytical skills
- Strong interpersonal and communication abilities
- Substantive knowledge of land use law, administrative law, environmental policy, and the federal environmental statutes—especially the Clean Air Act— preferred but not required.

Law students who wish to be considered for the position must submit a cover letter addressed to “Environmental Law Practicum Selection Committee – Clean Air Council”, resume, and writing sample of no more than ten pages. If you are interested, please forward your application materials to lawpract@temple.edu.

EDUCATION LAW PRACTICUM (EDUCATION LAW CENTER)

ELC pursues its mission through litigation and policy advocacy on behalf of the most vulnerable students—children living in poverty, children of color, children in the foster care and juvenile justice systems, children with disabilities, English Language Learners, LGBTQ students, and children experiencing homelessness. ELC has three priority program areas which often intersect: ensuring equal access to school, advocating for fair school funding, and dismantling the School-to-Prison Pipeline.

In this Practicum, students will support ELC’s direct representation activities by handling intake calls from clients and will support ELC’s litigation and legislative advocacy through legal research and writing. There are likely to be opportunities for at least one student to work on discovery and/or trial preparation in a major school finance adequacy/equity case.
