Research Assistant Opportunity

Professor Evelyn Rangel-Medina is seeking Temple Law students with law journal editing and/or graphic design experience to support ongoing scholarly research projects, including policy white papers, law review articles, and public-facing research materials.

Professor Rangel-Medina is an interdisciplinary legal scholar whose research focuses on immigration law, race and the law, Indigenous rights, and employment discrimination. Her scholarship explores how immigration law and enforcement affect mixed-status families and communities, particularly U.S. citizens of color, as well as the barriers to justice faced by working people.

Position Responsibilities

Research assistants will contribute to projects that communicate legal scholarship to academic, legal, and broader public audiences. Depending on their experience and interests, responsibilities may include:

- Conducting legal and interdisciplinary research.
- Assisting with drafting policy recommendations and research materials.
- Reviewing and editing scholarly manuscripts, including Bluebook citation checking.
- Collaborating with research partners and contributors.
- Designing graphics, infographics, and other visual representations of legal research.
- Preparing presentation materials and translating complex legal findings into accessible visual formats.

Qualifications

- Strong legal research, writing, and analytical skills.
- Interest in interdisciplinary scholarship, civil rights, and social justice.
- Familiarity with The Bluebook: A Uniform System of Citation (22d ed. 2025).
- Strong organizational skills, attention to detail, and ability to work collaboratively.
- Experience with law journal editing and/or graphic design.
- For applicants interested in design-focused work, familiarity with Adobe Creative Suite, Canva, or comparable software is preferred.

Eligibility

This opportunity is open to Temple Law students. Applicants with law journal editing experience, graphic design experience, or both are encouraged to apply. Prior professional graphic design experience is not required.

How to Apply

Please submit a résumé and a brief statement of interest describing your relevant experience. Applicants interested in graphic design responsibilities are also encouraged to submit samples of previous design work or a portfolio.

Send application materials to evelyn.rangel-medina@temple.edu with "Research Assistant" in the subject line.
